MONKY MARKET. Sunday, Jan. 4-6 P. M.

The stock market, so far as transactions are concerned, has been, during the past week, rather quiet. Thursday being a holydey, the business of the week was deranged, and very little was done before or since. Prices of stocks, generally, were much better at the close than they have been for some time past, and the indications are in favor of an advance for some days. The money market is decidedly easier, and the rate of interest in the street a little less than it was early in the week. Prime street a little less than it was early in the week. Prime street a little less than it was early in the week. Prime business paper sells at one and a quarter per cent per month, and the banks have loosened the screws a little upon their discount line. Any improvement that may take place in the quotations for stocks, must be made before the arrival of the steamer from Liverpool, and before the banks begin their pregarations for the Februtry quarterly reports. The steamer will be due about the 21st instant, and at that time the banks will commence their periodical contraction. No one can doubt mence their periodical contraction. No one can doubt but that the news from Europe, by the steamer leaving Liverpool on the 4th instant, will be of a very warlike character. The message of the President will by that character. The message of the President will by that time have been long enough before the people of Great Britain for the press to arrive at some point in the expression of public opinion in relation to the Oregon question; but the feeling among the members of the British Parliament, or of the ministry, will not be known in this country until about the first of March; and from the receipt of advices by the next steamer, up to, and perhaps for a long time after, the receipt of advices of movements in the Parliament of Great Britain, all commercial matters must continue in a very unsettled state, and the stock speculators, particularly, will be in a continual state of excitement, from the inflations and depressions in the stock market. Some time has elapsed since the last war panic prevailed, and things have become comparatively quiet. We look for another panic in about three weeks, equal to any of the previous ones.

We annex our usual comparative table of quotations for stocks in this market for each day of the week just closed, and at the close of the week previous. In many instances, the closing prices yesterday were at an advance on those ruling on the previous Saturday.

instances, the closing prices yesterday were at an advance on those ruling on the previous Saturday. The improvement in some of the fancy railroad stocks has closed with an upward tendency, and there is a very good prospect for a speculative movement for about a week or ten days.

A comparison of the quotations ruling yesterday, with those current at the close of the previous week, shows an advance in Long Island of 2½ per ct.; Harlem, ½; Canton 2½; Farmers' Loan, 1½; Penm. 5's, 2½; Kentucky 6's, 1½; Stonington, 1½; Eric RR., 10½; U. S. Bank, 1; Reading RR. 3½; Morris Canal, 2½; N. Am. Trust, ½. The market closed with an upward tendency, and there is a very good prospect for a speculative movement for about a week or tendency.

The only movement of interest going on in Wall street at present, is that in relation to the corner in Eric Reil road stock. Some of the wealthlest brokers are short of this stock, and a desperate attempt has been made to compromise the difference, or create new stock for delivery. More of this stock has been seld in the street than there are shares in the market; and if it is decided that stock created by a conversion of the bonds, is not a legal delivery, the difference required from the shorts will be immense. Some of the most extensive bears in the Eric Railroad, were the heaviest bulls in Norwich and Wor cester; and the result of their operations in Eric, is likely to be just about as profitable as in Norwich and Wor cester. Notwithstanding the great and rapid rise in Norwich, the biggest bulls made very little money by rt, on account of a secret division among the bulls themselves, by which the largest operator for a rise was out maneuvred, and experienced serioug losses at the close of the advance. This corner in Eric is likely to take many thousands of dollars out of the same operator; and between these two stocks, his losses must be very large. Everything depends upon the decision that may be made by the Board of Brokers to-morrow. Each party is sanguine of success. The party wishing to deliver stock created by converting the honds of the company, have several precedents to offer in favor of that morement; while the receivers arrange. bonds of the company, have several precedents to offer in favor of that morement; while the receivers argue that the understanding at the time the contracts were made, must be taken in o consideration. The price of the bonds, and the price of the old stock, differs so much that the receivers could not have anticipated any such construction to their contracts as the shorts wish to place upon them; but if the shorts can produce any place upon them; but if the shorts can produce any precedents, regulating previous operations of a similar character, they will establish a strong case. The body before which this case will come, from the decision of which there is no appeal have very little faith in prece-dents. Individual interest, for the time, regulates the vote of each member, and the result, therefore, depends Such is the excitement in Wall street, in relation to this question, that very little business will be transacted, at either Board, in any stock, until the difficulties growing out of this matter are settled. The old Board will be occupied nearly the whole session, in listening to argu-ments in favor of and against the points at issue, and the result will be looked for with the greafest anxiety. Several members of the Union Club are deeply inter-ested in the decision, as they are receivers of a large number of shares.

The annexed table exhibits the value and destination of the exports from this port for December, 1845. Of the aggregate value of merobandize exported, nearly two-thirds were shipped to Great Britain and her dependencies. Among the items exported to Great Britain from this port in December, there were 76,653 barrels of flour, 55,150 bushels of wheat, 42,150 bushels barley, 136,000 bushels of corn, and 1,862,600 pounds of cheese, valued at nearly one-half the total export for the month to that country. A very large per cent of the aggregate exports from this port was in domestic merchandise.

The average per cent duty on the total imports in 1844 and 1845, was a fraction short of thirty per cent. The average of one year compared with the other, does not vary a fifth part of a per cent. The decrease in exports in 1845, was 3,803,466 more than the decrease in exports.

vary a fifth part of a per cent. The decrease in imports in 1845, was 3,863,468 more than the decrease in exports showing a balance in our favor on the foreign trade of this port in 1845, that amount greater than in 1844.

The decrease in the revenue from customs received at this port in 1845, compared with 1844, was nearly four millions of dollars. The decrease in the receipts at the Boston Custom House for the year, amounts to about seven hundred thousand dollars, and it would be safe to estimate the fulling off in the revenue from customs, at all the ports of entry, for 1845, at six millions of dollars. The surplus revenue is also decreasing, and the increased expenditures growing out of the condition of our foreign relations must reduce the deposits of the Government very rapidly. Within the past month there has been a failing off of mere than helf a million of dollars.

The aggregate amount in all the depositories of the government on the 29th fof December, was $335,935 less than on the 30th of November, and the amount on deposit in the banks of the three principal cities on the 29th of December, was $832,217 less than on the 30th of Noof December, was $532,217 less than on the 30th of November previous. If the revenue in 1846 from customs should be no larger than in 1846, and the expenditures of the government continue the same as for the past year, the surplus revenue will be pretty nearly used up at the close of the present year. We should judge, from present appearances, that the revenue from customs would be less this year than last. The probability of the tariff being reduced will reduce our foreign importations, until the question is settled one way or the other, or Congress adjourns; and on this account we anticipate a very limited spring importation. The operation of these things will be very favorable. A reduced importation and a reduced revenue at this time are desirable things, as they will make trade generally more healthy, and do as they will make trade generally more healthy, and do away with the opposition, in a measure, to the sub

LATEST INTELLIGENCE BY THE MAILS.

Pakenham is greatly alarmed lest his efforts to compromise the difficulties between this government and his should not succeed. He has made overtures to Mr Buchanan, but the latter is waiting for the next arrival from England, in order to hear of the reception of the President's Message. Every thing will turn upon that. The administration is thing will turn upon that. The administration is anxious for a compromise, but outwardly, and to all appearance, in favor of war. All this pretension of theirs is only humbug; yet a very little thing would stir up a fight.

There is a delegation on here from your city, consisting of Messrs. Bogardus, Warren and Connelly. They have come from the Custom House, to watch Mr. Lawrence's interests. There is no necessity for this, for that gentleman will, of course, be confirmed.

The excitement against Woodward, of Pennsylvania, continues to increase hourly. The Preaident does not know what to make of it. He leels he has made a mistake, and does not know how to get clear of it. The Senate, too, is overwhelmed with remonstrances against his confirmation. They are pooring in from every quarter of the country. The whigs having formally denounced "nativism," will leave him in the hands of the democratic misjority, and wash their own skirts clear of the responsibility of his confirmation, if it should take place. If they do this, they will gain at the next election twenty times the number of votes they lost at the last, by their temporary connexion with the "native" party.

Horatio Jones, a clerk in the State Department, was removed on the 31st ult. I have not heard the reason for it, nor is it yet known who his successor is to be.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 3, 1846.

Washington, Jan. 3, 1846.

The war panic still rages in the House. Mr. Ingersoll, Chairman on Foreign Relations, led off, today, in a temperate, facetious, witty and diplomatic speech, for the whole of Oregon—and promised that the committee would report the twelve months' notice by-and-by. Mr. Darragh, of Pennsylvania, was for "the whole of Oregon, or none"—and indulged in a fling at South Carolina; whereupon Mr. Holmes thought that, while one rifle would do to shoot down the wolf (Mexico), a dozen might not be too many for the lion (Great Britain). Mr. King, of New York, went for the whole territory, to shoot down the wolf (Mexico), a dozen might not be too many for the lion (Great Britain). Mr. King, of New York, went for the whole territory, because it was necessary to preserve something like a balance against negro slavery. Mr. Winthrop was for peace—even if peace should require the suspension of the twelve months' notice. Mr. Owen was for giving the notice. Mr. Baker, (whig) of Illinois, took all the wind out of Judge Douglass's sails. He not only went for the whole of Oregon—but for the whole continent; and the giving, when war shall commence, notice to Great Britain, not only to leave Oregoe, but Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Newfoundland, and Jamaica. Mr. Baker was all over in a blaze of glory several times during his speech—and must have been enraptured with the plaudits of the galleries, from the increased enthusiasm of the gentleman's indignation against John Bull, at such intervals. After which, the House adjourned.

One thing is reduced to a certainty—the twelve months' notice will go through the House with as great a majority as the Texas annexation. What will be the result in the Senate, is not so well ascertained; but we think it will go through. And, what will be the result in the Senate, is not so well ascertained; but we think it will go through. And, what will be the result then? Why, Great Britain must either come to terms or fight. It will have the effect of precipitating a settlement one way or the other, and whether in the scale of peace or of war, let us arm the seaboard, and rig the shipping.

You may expect to hear of Levin, the native, flaming away in gallant style, next week, for the latitude of fitty-four forty. The most besutiful feature in Ingersoll's remarks, was the idea that we should ultimately colonize the whole of Oregon, North of 49, with Chinese and emigrants from the island of Japan. He said they made first rate colonists. Levin, we expect, will object to that.

Mr. Robert Owen, the philosophical philanthropist, has come to town. We understand he goes for the wh has come to town. We understand he goes for the whole of Oregon or none.

There was a quiet social hop at the United States Hotel last night. We are to have them every Friday evening, henceforward.

House of Representatives.

Washington, January 3, 1846.

After the reading of the journal, the question came up on the Oregon business, left unfinished yesterday.

Mr. Charles J. Isakington. He said the only thing we wanted in Oregon was men and women. The only thing we can do is to settle the country. We must get children. The ladies' gallery, on this expression, was a universal blush. A few minutes before, it was a constellation of shining stars, but it was immediately turned into a milky way of scented cambric. Some one in the neighborhood of Mr. McCommell's seat said, "Then, Charley, you need not go!"

Mr. Ingrassoll said be was sorry to find his oriental friend, the chairman of the Committee on Territories, absent. (Cries of "West is not oriental.") Mr. Ingersoll replied, "Occidental, sir; ex-idental, sir, (referring to Mr. Douglass's sout little body.)

He was not for "materly inactivity," like a distinguished stateman, (Calhoun.) This country was being rapidly settled. Since he spoke about two years ago, the population of Oregon had increased to seven millions. (R-are of laughter.) Seven thousand. No wonder that we should have a little exaggeration about Oregon. These men had more rifles in their hands, and were more in number than England has there, or can send there. We have power enough now there to hold Oregon in spite of Greet Britain. We aggeration about Oregon. These men had more rifles in their hands, and were more in number than England has there, or can send there. We have power enough now there to hold Oregon in spite of Great Britain. We went make war unless necessary. Oregon might be like the scenes through which Gan. Othelle passed, fall of deserts, and dangers, and rooks going above the clouds—but still, if necessary, he would fight for it.

There will be in a day or or two, he noped, a actice from the Committee on Foreign Relations, to terminate the joint occupany, as it had been called. He was for compromise, but not for surrender. In a few years there would be thousands of Chinese and Japanese workmen there, and it would have a vast influence on both hemispheres. He (Mr. Ingersoll) was for peace; but if were comes, then no peace while an inch of English territory remains on the continent.

Mr. Hanalson obtained the floor, and said he thought this discussion was premature. He concluded by meying the previous question. Upon this the question was taken by tellers. Afirmative 43, negative 78.

Mr. Danalous, of Fennsylvania, obtained the floor, and after some complaint about his being prevented from getting the floor before, said he was in favor of every rood of Oregon, and m favor of giving the notice. He hoped certain gentlemen would be now as valorous as on Texas.

Mr. Holmes, of Bouth Carolins, explained. He was not airaid of war. But the case was different from Texas.

10. Paratro Kino, of New York, read an extract in the Courier and Enguirer from the London Times, and made some allusious to the game being played in this House.

Mr. Douglass explained.

Mr. Kino was in favor of the Oregon bill. He did not believe that the administration were playing any game. The English had met the Americane at Bunker Hill. Yorktown, Saratoga, Princaten, and New Orleans, and they know us. If England shall not interfere between nations on this continent, shall she interfere with eer own territory? He said he believed that the administration knew that the 49th parallel would be rejected, or they would not have offered it.

Mr. Winvince took the floor, and chained the attention of the House for an hour. He was opposed to the termination notice. He doubted whether he would take up even his own resolutions, which he offered a few days since. He was willing that they should be laid on the table, as a record of his own opinions. We had sights in Oregon, which he was willing to defend. He spursed all imputations on his patriotism. Love of country was not to be judged by hatred of other nations. It was too true that there were vulgar allusions of this kind, to which the heart of the public vibrated—but there were better feelings too. It had been easid, that one man should take the sense of the people, and another the nonsense, and that the chances were, the latter would beat the former ten to one. But there was a better sense after all, and to that he would appeal—to the Christian, educated, moral sense of the people. If he wished to make this a party question, he might retort upon the Administration. He might retort upon the Administration. He might not world would be justified in turning us betti out, if the native savages could only assert their rights. If ward did come, no vote of his should cripple the nation. He hought our title the best of the two. Perhaps we had the best right to the whole of Oregon, if the question was a new one; but the ci
